India aims for 10% 6G patents by 2030

DoT launches Bharat 6G Alliance to drive innovation

JATIN GROVER
New Delhi, July 3

THE DEPARTMENT OF telecommunications on Monday launched an alliance of industry leaders and academia to drive innovation in next generation wireless technology as the government aims for 10% of 6G patents by 2030.

The government is eyeing to launch the 6G network by 2030.

The 15-member Bharat 6G Alliance will be led by TCS chief operating officer N Ganapathy Subramaniam.

Union communications minister Ashwini Vaishnaw said the 6G alliance is basically a body created by the industry, academia and the government, so that all work related to 6G development could be done in a very methodical, proper and systematic way.

India has so far acquired over 200 patents of 6G technology and the number is increasing every week, he stressed. "We should keep a minimum target that 10% of the 6G IPR (intellectual property rights) are from India by the time we reach 2029 or 2030," the minister added.

Telecom secretary K Rajaraman said the task of coordinating, connecting and integrating is what probably the Bharat 6G

Alliance should do, so that India's presence is felt on the global telecommunication map.

Apart from N Ganapathy Subramaniam, the alliance will include Jagbir Singh, CTO of Vodafone Idea; Rajkumar Upadhyay, CEO of C-DoT; Kumar N Sivarajan, CTO of Tejas Networks; Jagdish Mitra; chief strategy officer of Tech Mahindra; and Ayush Bhatnagar, senior vice president of Jio.

Alliance chairman Subramaniam said, "In our initial discussions regarding 6G, the primary focus areas will be how to give highly differentiated experience for sectors such as health and education; how entertainment is going to be consumed and how we increase productivity in everything that we do."

The 6G network will provide more reliable and affordable solutions with speeds almost 100 times faster than 5G.

In March, the government had launched a vision document for 6G services in the country. The 6G vision document highlighted a roadmap to the launch of 6G services, recommendations from task forces, financial support required for projects and the opening of spectrum bands.

The alliance under the 6G Apex Council will have a general body, governing council and several working groups. The focus of the alliance will be to help grow 5G advanced and 6G intellectual properties (IPs) and essential patents from India, build 5G advanced/6G products and solutions, support India's participation in the 3GPP standards and to enable market access for startups.

EXPLAINER DARK PATTERNS IN E-COMMERCE

The consumer affairs ministry recently urged top e-commerce players "to refrain from incorporating any design or pattern in the online interface that may fall in the category of dark patterns." It is also reportedly framing guidelines against such practices. Mukesh Jagota explains what dark patterns are and why the Centre wants to impose curbs

Other ways this happens

Forced action: Making it mandatory to opt for sharing of contact and other details with entities other than on which a purchase is being made, for the purchase to get completed.

Nagging: Constant pop-ups requesting sharing of information in exchange for discounts.

Subscription traps: This makes it easy to subscribe to a service but difficult to cancel.

The cancellation button is either hidden or hard to locate, or steps are very complex. To start free trials, the platform asks for and stores billing details and automatically starts charging on trial expiry.

Bait and switch: It refers to luring customers with one offer and then switching it with another. Advertising a product at low price with attractive features and switching with a different and more expensive service.

Hidden costs: This tactic involves hiding additional costs from consumers until they are already committed to making a purchase.

What are dark patterns

THE 'DARK WEB' are common knowledge now. A common misconception is that 'dark patterns' in e-commerce is contraband e-commerce happening over the dark web. That isn't the case. Dark patterns are the everyday "manipulative practices" (as the government sees it) customers are subjected to at the hands of e-commerce and web services they patronise.

This manipulation takes on many forms and the ultimate goal of this is to make consumers spend more than they had originally intended by inducing greed, urgency and fear. Other forms of manipulation take the form of adding extras on purchases without explicit consent, hiding full costs and making the process of opting out of the subscriptions difficult.

OF 75 PLATFORMS IN EU HAD AT LEAST ONE DARK PATTERN: 2022 SURVEY

Amazon
SUFFERED ACTION IN THE US FOR NON-CONSENSUAL ENROLMENT IN PRIME

$246 mn
REFUND ORDER AGAINST MAKERS OF FORTNITE BY US FTC

In India
TREATED AS UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES UNDER LAW

How it commonly works

Inducing urgency: The practice here is flashing 'info-nuggets' such as "only few pieces left" along with the product. The 'number left' is often in low single-digits. Thus, the platform rushes an user into a purchase decision. Another tactic is flashing a countdown after which a discount expires.

Basket sneaking: This is common at the time of payment. An offer is made to the user—"buy goods worth ₹X more and qualify for free delivery/additional discount." Another way is adding services or products to a purchase without consent. The add-ons are preselected. It is most visible in electronics purchases; the add on is extended warranty or damage insurance.

Confirm shaming: A travel website tells a customer making a purchase about the number of people who have taken add-ons like travel and baggage insurance. Then, a choice pops up: "Yes secure my trip" or "No, I will risk my trip".

What countries are doing about this

A JANUARY 2023 survey by the European Commission found that of the 399 online shops, 148 were resorting to dark pattern practices. Actions have followed in Norway and in the US against bellwethers like Amazon. One case in the US involved the non-consensual enrolment in the Amazon Prime programme. The Federal Trade Commission has also taken action against the makers of Fortnite, the popular game, where a dark pattern was used to charge customers without their consent, secretly saving credit-card details. Fortnite has been ordered to refund $245 million.

In India, dark patterns come under the ambit of Unfair Trade Practices listed in the Consumer Protection Act 2019. The relevant sections are those dealing with using unfair methods or deceptive practice to promote a sale. Manipulating choice is violative of consumer rights under the Act.

On June 13, the consumer affairs ministry organised a stakeholder consultation with major e-com players, industry bodies, consumer organisations and law experts. On June 28, platforms were advised not to use any means to deceive consumers or manipulate them.

They were also warned of strict action for such behaviour. The ministry also encourages consumers to report instances of it on National Consumer Helpline.

Next leg of telecom reforms soon: Vaishnaw

COMMUNICATIONS MINISTER ASHWINI Vaishnaw on Monday said the next leg of telecom reforms will be rolled out in a couple of months, focusing on user protection.

The department of telecommunications in May had launched the Sanchar Saathi portal to help users track their lost mobile phones.

"We are always putting our reforms in two categories. One is structural reform. Second is procedural reform. We have taken up some very important points both on the structural and procedural part. And we have now focused on user protection," Vaishnaw said, adding that the reforms will be rolled out in the a couple of months.

Alliance should do, so that India's presence is felt on the global telecommunication map.

"We are working with industry on how to bring more reforms with regard to user safety," the minister said.
